

Wallace resigns as Conservative leader

VICTORIA (CP) — Progressive Conservative leader Scott Wallace, a self-described "misfit in politics," announced Thursday his intention to withdraw from British Columbia politics.

Leaders of the three other major parties in B.C. expressed sorrow at his departure, but respect for his decision.

"I am genuinely sorry to hear that Scott Wallace plans to leave political life in British Columbia," Premier Bill Bennett said in a written statement.

"I have great respect for Dr. Wallace as an articulate spokesman for his party. His departure is a blow to the Progressive Conservative party in British Columbia.

"I am sure that all government MLAs will agree that while we may differ strongly on political issues, we have great respect for Scott Wallace's contribution to the provincial legislature.

"Politics in British Columbia will be much less interesting after Dr. Wallace leaves the political arena."

Wallace said he sent a letter to provincial party president Frank Oberle suggesting that a new leader be chosen at the party's annual meeting in Kelowna

Oct. 7-10. He said he will decide at that time whether to step down then as an MLA or wait until the next election is called.

RIGHT EXPERIENCE

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said Wallace "represents the kind of experience and knowledge and dedication that all parties would be happy to have in terms of their own MLAs."

"He has given tremendous service to the people of the province... he will be missed," said Barrett.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson, who like Wallace is his party's sole MLA in the legislature said he was sorry to hear the announcement.

"Scott is not only a good friend, but the person I most admire in the legislature," said Gibson.

"I'm glad that for the time being he's staying on as an MLA. You just have to realize that there's something wrong with our... adversary system around here where a greater place can't be found for an individual like Scott Wallace."

Wallace told a news conference earlier Thursday that he will step down as leader of the party this fall and will not run again in the next provincial election.

He said his "common sense, moderation and sweet reason" were not suitable to the political climate of B.C.

Wallace, 47, indicated he will probably go back to his general practitioner's practice in Oak Bay, but said he has been cut of medicine so long that the decision must be made soon.

He first ran in provincial politics for the Social Credit party in Oak Bay during the 1969 election. He crossed the floor to sit as an independent in 1971 and then a few months later joined the Conservative party.

Wallace was re-elected in 1972, became party leader in late 1973 and was re-elected again in 1975.

He cited personal reasons for not continuing his political career, but also outlined his disillusionment with politics in general and B.C. in particular, where voters choose extremes.

STICK TO FACTS

"I tried to play it straight to stick to the facts in thinking that most voters are commonsense people," he said. "That doesn't seem to be the answer."

Wallace's three-and-a-half year term as party leader were filled with battles, philosophical and political, with the party hierarchy.

His style of leadership, he said, was not palatable to the federal arm of the party and not successful provincially.

"I only regret that I have not succeeded in providing the kind of leadership and charisma which attracts many new members and which is essential in building a party with the capacity to become the government in this province."

"PIECES ARE FALLING INTO PLACE" - MUNRO IWA wins province-wide pension

Kerry Delaney, Grant Harris and Wayne Sussbauer are three students hired by the federal government Young Canada Works program to construct hiking trails in the Terrace area. Their work is on Bornite, Thornhill and Sleeping Beauty Mountains.

CLEARING PATHWAYS Trail-blazing students

Herald Staff Writer

Trails will be upgraded on Bornite and Thornhill Mountains and a new trail cut on Sleeping Beauty's northeast ridge under a Young Canada Works program that will employ three Terrace students this summer.

Kerry Delaney, Grant Harris, and Wayne Sussbauer have been working since school finished on improvements to the Bornite trail. "Thus far," the trio says, "we have cleared windfalls, undergrowth, repaired corduroy, marked the trail, and are involved in some bridge reconstruction for the first two-thirds of the trail."

The students hope to have finished their work on the trail by today.

It was while on a hike up Sleeping Beauty Mtn. that the plans for the summer project were hatched, he explained.

Delaney, his brother Kevan, Be Wassink, and Allan Stradski succeeded during their trip last summer to reach beautiful alpine areas but not, as Kerry put it, "without great difficulty."

"The forest which stands on the slopes which lead up to the ridges is dense, wet, tangled, and severely overgrown."

An application was made to the Young Canada Works program and with approval and $4,000 in funding, work began. The goal: "A trail up to timberline which would benefit the recreational activities of the region."

The students are also using the program to make residents more aware of hiking opportunities in the Terrace area.

Delaney added that local business and government have given them help in carrying out their function.

Terrace Equipment Sales provided some of the needed equipment at no cost to the students, a needed help because the government funds include very little provision for expenses.

"No money is available for us to obtain a power saw. If anybody would be able to aid us in these matters, please feel free to call. We may be able to work out some sort of a short term deal. The use of a saw for a few occasions throughout the summer would be great aid to us. Trail construction without a saw is extremely difficult."

Reflecting on some of the hiking opportunities nearby, they wrote: "Bornite Mountain trail is just east of Terrace, near Kleanza Creek campsite. It is most suitable for a family hike, being within the capacity of anyone in moderate physical condition.

"If you're looking for something to do on a

THOUSAND FISH DEAD

CRANBROOK, B.C. (CP) — The mayor of this East Kootenay community says it's not the city's fault that Joseph Creek dried up, killing hundreds of fish.

Ty Colgur said Wednesday the city has continued its standard practice of supplying the creek with 700,000 gallons of water a day.

He denied charges by provincial fisheries biologist Norm Ringstead that up to 1,000 fish have died because the city decided to cut off the creek's water supply and store it upstream.

City engineer Fred Crashley said he suspects water is being removed from the stream below the reservoir.

"Some people are using water without a licence, and some without a priority licence are also using water," he said.

An inspector from the provincial water rights branch will investigate the dry creek.

Saturday, you should consider a hike up this mountain."

They also recommend Einar Blix's new book, "Trails to Timberline," which documents 50 area hiking opportunities.

PANMUNJON, Korea (AP) — The shooting down of a United States Army helicopter by North Korea, with three Americans reported killed and one captured, raised tensions along an old battlefield Thursday.

The United States sought an urgent meeting to discuss the incident but the two sides were unable to agree immediately on a time.

The U.S.-led United Nations Command in Seoul said the Chinook helicopter "strayed accidentally" into Communist territory and called on North Korea to convene a meeting of the Military Armistice Commission to discuss the "regrettable" incident.

President Carter said in Washington "our primary interest is in having the incident not escalate into a confrontation."

"We understand that two of the crew members were killed when the helicopter

Only Northwood refuses request

VANCOUVER CP — The International Woodworkers of America achieved a "major breakthrough" in its current negotiations Wednesday when employers agreed to a single retirement pension plan for some 43,000 B.C. woodworkers.

Except for one major company operated by Noranda, the operators on the coast and in the southern and northern interior "agreed to our demands," said Jack Munro, western regional president of the union.

"This is a major breakthrough. It means one level of benefits and one rate of contributions."

"There will be one provincial plan that will be portable throughout Western Canada. It will be a healthier plan and it will make it possible for workers to move anywhere in Western Canada without any fear of losing benefits. They won't feel they are tied to one employer."

There are another 10,000 woodworkers on the prairies.

Munro said he had made the single provincial plan a personal goal when he became IWA president in 1973.

CONTINUE TO MEET

Munro said sub-committees of both sides are continuing to meet to work out the details of the provincial plan, including past service benefits which are exempt under the federal anti-inflation board guidelines.

He said the agreement by Forest Industrial Relations, Southern Interior Forest Labor Relations Association, and the Cariboo Forest

SUMMER JOB AT $1,625 MONTHLY

VICTORIA (CP) — Transport Minister Jack Davis was accused Thursday of practising nepotism and patronage for hiring his son-in-law as his executive assistant.

Gary Lauk (NDP—Vancouver Centre) told reporters that Davis's hiring of Michael McKelvie was "the height of patronage... it borders on corruption."

However, Davis defended his actions, saying McKelvie was the only person available to fill the job at short notice. Davis's former executive assistant was forced to resign because of poor health.

McKelvie is going into third year law at Queen's University in Ontario this fall. His appointment as executive assistant runs from May 1 to Aug. 31 and provides a monthly salary of $1,625.

TARNISHES GOVERNMENT

Lauk said the hiring of one's son-in-law for a summer holiday job that brings such a high salary tarnishes the government.

Davis said he sees nothing wrong with it at all. He said McKelvie was well qualified for the job because he has had business experience as well as working as executive assistant for two federal cabinet ministers.

The minister stressed that the job of executive assistant is a political one, not a civil service position.

Lauk said such nepotism was never practised by the former New Democratic Party government.

"Let's have some standard of morality," he said.

Premier Bill Bennett said he was unaware that McKelvie was Davis's son-in-law.

MACDONALD: Bennett must give "moral leadership"

VICTORIA (CP) — The controversy in the British Columbia legislature surrounding alleged interference by a government MLA in the insurance Corp. of B.C. continued Thursday, with Alex Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) calling for moral leadership from the premier.

Kerster of improperly intervening in ICBC claims in order to get favorable results for associates and a company he used to head.

Macdonald said on Wednesday that ICBC had broken its own rules to pay a claim by Surrey Dodge Ltd., which Kerster headed until his election to the legislature in December, 1975.

personal guarantor of its still outstanding obligations to I.A.C. Ltd. for advances made to the company under a debenture dated Aug. 5, 1975. The car dealership went bankrupt after Kerster left it.

Kerster denied that the circumstances outlined by Macdonald meant he still had an interest in the firm.

Earlier, Macdonald asked Bennett what action he would take in light of the obvious conflict of interest.

Bennett said he considered it an MLA's duty to stand up for his constituents, and said that if Macdonald was making charges of wrongdoing, they should be made against ICBC, not Kerster.

crashed," said Carter. "Another was killed in the exchange of gunfire in some way we don't know yet. And the fourth one apparently has been captured."

A White House spokesman later said there was no exchange of gunfire in the sense American or South Korean soldiers fired at North Koreans.

U.S. Rear Admiral Warren C. Hamm, senior commission member on the UN side, sent a message to North Korean authorities asking that the crew and helicopter be returned.

FAIL TO SHOW

The North Koreans failed to show up at the truce site at hours twice requested by the UN Command. The UN side then called for a meeting Friday afternoon while North Korea proposed it be held Saturday.

North Korean radio said the "armed" helicopter "infiltrated deep into the portion of our side" and Michael Chipman, of Terrace, the driver of this 1965 Chevy Impala, was charged with driving with undue care and attention after his car rear-ended a 1973 International driven by Carol Olive McRobb of Terrace. The accident occurred Wednesday afternoon at the intersection of Greig and Emerson.

Smith-Grant wedding

Allan and Sheila (nee Smith) Grant.

On Sunday, May 22, 1977 at 2 p.m. Terrace Pentecostal church was the scene of a lovely spring wedding. Sheila, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Smith of 4627 Munthe Ave., Terrace B.C. and Allan, son of Mr. and Mrs. R.E. Grant of Calgary, Alberta, were united in holy matrimony, with Rev. Merle Kennedy officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was a picture of liveliness in a beautiful long white empire waist-line chiffon gown, with ribbon laced bodice and long sheer sleeves. From her matching jeweled cap flowers a shoulder length veil, and she carried a bouquet of red roses interspersed with baby's breath. Her only jewelry was a gold heart-shaped locket with diamond insert, a gift from the groom.

Her attendants were: Jill Martinuk - maid of honor, Lynn Warner and Susie Kornichuk - bridesmaids. They looked lovely in long yellow dresses of Organga, with bankerchief sleeves and carried a bouquet of red, yellow and white daisies intermingled with baby's breath. In their hair they wore matching flower daisies.

Const. Joe MacInnis was bestman. Const. Ron Harrison and Const. Al McGregor were ushers. Little four year old Jeremy Smith, nephew of the bride was "ring-bearer". He was dressed in "red serge", an exact replica of the groom, bestman and ushers.

The bride's mother wore a long light blue jersey silk gown with a pink carnation corsage, while the groom's mother chose a turquoise jersey silk gown with a white corsage.

During the signing of the register, Francis Dodd accompanied by Darinda Blackstock on the organ sang "The Wedding Prayer" to the tune of "Oh Danny Boy".

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Bavarian Inn, where over a hundred guests sat down to a delicious buffet luncheon.

Here the task of master of ceremonies was very able conducted by Mr. George McCullough. Telegrams were read and toasts proposed. Mr. Clarence Warner, a long time friend of the family, proposed the toast to the bride. After which Dorinda Blackstock and Shirley Jangen sang "Near You" (The B.C. Tel commercial).

A request of the bride, as it had meant so much to the couple during their courtship, when the groom was stationed in Granisle and they had to communicate by telephone.

Just before the closing of the reception the bride and groom cut and served the wedding cake which was beautifully decorated by Mrs. Florence Bailey. Then Shirley Jangen sang "The Wedding Song".

Following the reception open house was held at the home of the bride's parents.

The newlyweds left for a short honeymoon via Kelsey Bay ferry to points south, and then on to Calgary where the groom's parents held another reception for friends and relatives unable to attend the wedding.

Allan is with the Department of the R.C.M.P. in Prince Rupert and Sheila is with Trans Provincial Airlines. Their address is 221 (B) 5th Street, Prince Rupert, and both extend a sincere welcome to all their friends to visit when in the Prince Rupert area.

All out-of-town guests at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. Grant, Clive and Cathy - Calgary, Alberta. Mrs. Elise Smith - Victoria. Mr. and Mrs. Peter Serkenruch - Richmond, B.C. Sandra Horder - Calgary Alberta. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Glass - Victoria, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Glass and Barb - Smithers, Wanda and Sherry Glass - Smithers, Mrs. Fred Coles and Family - Smithers.

N.Y. BLACKOUT BRINGS LOOTING, TERROR

Big Apple rotten at the core

NEW YORK (AP) — The largest city in the United States started struggling back to life and light Thursday after a paralyzing blackout, but the recovery went much more slowly than expected.

At its peak Wednesday night and Thursday morning, the power failure which started at 9:34 p.m. EDT Wednesday left 10 million people without electricity and brought looting and what Mayor Abraham Beame called "a night of terror."

Outraged city officials demanded an explanation from Consolidated Edison of why, despite safety devices, lightning bolts shut down its massive power system.

President Carter ordered a Federal Power Commission (FPC) investigation.

By mid-afternoon Thursday, 18 hot and humid hours after the lights went out, about 40 per cent of Con Ed's 2.8 million residential and business customers were still without power. The utility started the day by saying it hoped to have virtually all electricity restored by 2 p.m., but by 3:30 p.m. the deadline was pushed to midnight. There was no immediate explanation why it was taking so long to restore power.

Health threat

The FPC said the blackout posed "a severe threat to health and safety and was intolerable." The agency criticized Con Ed for failure to adopt adequate safeguards.

"The people have been the victims of violence, vandalism and looting," Beame said at a news conference.

"The people have been subjected to a night of terror... I consider it a total outrage that at this hour the City of New York is still without power and the prospects from Con Edison for a full restoration of it are vague."

He said the cost to the city will be enormous, although he could not give an estimate.

LONG WAIT FORFEEN

As Beame spoke, more than half Con Ed's 2.8 million residential and business customers were still without power. Neighborhood by neighborhood, power came back through the day, but officials said there was a chance some people would not get electricity again until today.

Temperatures neared 34 celsius Thursday for the second day. Stores, banks, stock exchanges and other businesses were closed. Subways and commuter rail lines were stopped. The city's two airports, Kennedy International and LaGuardia, were closed for several hours.

The normally frantic pace of midtown Manhattan slowed to a crawl.

Lightning is blamed

The blackout began after lightning struck power lines and generating stations in suburban Westchester, knocking out power to the city and some surrounding areas. "There are safety devices to protect against this," said Con Ed spokesman. "We just don't know what went wrong."

Some New Yorkers spent part of the night trapped in elevators. Others, guided by candles or flashlights, cautiously made their way up or down flight after flight of stairs or were led from the darkness of subway tunnels to emergency exits. Telephones and transistor radios offered the only link with the outside world for many stranded in apartments on highlevel floors.

Residents of some of the city's apartment towers began running out of water. The buildings depend on electric pumps to carry their water to giant rooftop tanks, from which it then flows into faucets. Once the tanks were drained, there was no more water.

3,000 arrests

There were countless tales of individual kindnesses and co-operation, but scattered neighborhoods — mostly the poorer sections — were hit by looting and isolated violence as the hot humid night wore on. Nearly 3,000 persons were arrested for looting — at least six times the arrests for all causes on a normal night — and a disused jail was reopened to detain them. Seventy-eight police officers were injured in the violence.

The mayor said there were 1,625 fire alarms during the night of which all but 576 were false. There were 42 serious fires, including one which took the life of a fireman. About two dozen firefighters were injured.

New York Gov. Hugh Carey put the National Guard on alert but discovered that the majority of guardsmen were at summer training camps near the Canadian border.

The blackout brought memories of the November, 1965 power failure that lasted 12 hours. But there were several major differences. The 1965 outage affected the entire northeastern U.S. as well as parts of Quebec and Ontario. This time, only the New York metropolitan area was affected. In 1965, there were few reports of violence.

Beame, who had warned earlier that "it will not be possible to operate a normal day," said he was appointing a special board of inquiry to conduct an investigation into all aspects of the power failure. I believe the people of this city must be assured that this will never happen again."

Strong economic growth forecast

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conference Board in Canada predicted Thursday that the national economy will show strong growth of about 5 1/4 per cent in 1978 after a sluggish 1977 in which the gross national product (GNP) is forecast to expand by three per cent.

The privately financed economic research group's forecast contrasted with an earlier report it released Thursday stating consumers are pessimistic about the economic outlook and planned to restrain their spending, at least for the next six months.

Taking a longer view, the board says the next 18 months look good for the national economy.

The board's optimism stems partly from a continuing economic recovery in the United States-Canada's biggest market—and the expected end of some business uncertainty as the government nears a final decision about ending wage and price controls.

While forecasting an economie pick-up, the board expects unemployment to remain high. The jobless rate will stay near its June level of eight per cent for the rest of this year, and decline only to about 7.7 per cent in 1978.

But consumer prices should stop rising so quickly. The consumer price index, the most widely used inflation measure, will rise at an average rate of about 5 1/2 per cent in 1978 after increasing 7 1/2 per cent this year, the board forecasts. In its report on consumer buying intentions, the board found average householders worried that inflation would worsen and that job opportunities would be scarce. Accordingly, they were reluctant to spend for the next six months.

BASED ON SURVEY

The consumer buying intentions review is based on a survey across the country, while its forecasts about the national economy are prepared by its staff of economists.

Rene de Cotret, president of the Ottawa-based board, said the only qualifier added to his generally optimistic forecast is that the length and strength of a recovery is "heavily dependent upon policy decisions till to be announced and upon a continued favorable economic environment among our major trading partners."

Some of the board's forecasts for key economic indicators in 1978:

—Housing starts will rise by 8 1/2 per cent to 255,000 units from 235,000 in 1977.

—Business investment in plant and equipment will rise by four per cent next year.

—Productivity, or output per worker, will gain markedly by about 2.2 per cent in 1978 after rising only 1.6 per cent this year and labor costs as a percentage of production costs will continue moderating.

—Corporate taxes before profits should rise by 13 1/2 per cent in 1978 following increase of 13 per cent this year.

Lodge offers day care program

Day time activities for senior citizens feeling trapped or perhaps in danger while at home are planned by the Skeenaview Lodge. The Terrace facility, a psychogeriatric hospital, hopes to establish a kind of day care centre for the elderly, a place that "children" can take their parents while they themselves are at work.

As head nurse Len Chin explains, many elderly people suffering from the confusion brought on by old age develop increasing problems in later years. Problems of orientation, improper diet, lack of motivation, or decreasing sense of independence arise among many senior citizens.

During times when children are in the house, there is little threat to the well-being of these individuals. But while the guardian is at work, there is often a deepening feeling of potential danger in leaving the parent at home.

Case in point: a working mother returns home one day to find her own elderly father lying on the living room, passed out, for reasons impossible for a layman to determine on the spot.

With the day care program Skeenaview hopes to offer, the working person has a degree of assurance that his parent is cared for, that his specific requirements are understood and tended to by competent staff while the wage earner is at work.

Skeenaview has no desire to lure new residents nor increase its clientele.

Instead, says Chin, there is a belief that through this program, continuing support and therapy can be provided to assist the client in remaining in the community. He says the day care program would "encourage the use of as many of the (client's) physical and emotional strengths as possible under the supervision of professional nursing care and assessment."

He also feels the program would provide a safe, protective environment while retaining the client's sense of family identity.

Three possible rooms in the lodge could be used for the program, Chin told the Herald, and present Skeenaview staff would be utilized.

Programs offered would include peer identification and comradeship, remotivational activities, nutritional diets, orientation to a psychogeriatric centre, and activities to retain present levels of independence.

Peer identification provides a steady influence for individuals who have trouble getting around while alone at home. Through the program, Chin said, clients would meet other members of the community.

Remotivational activities might include cards, conversation or group exercise while activities designed to maintain independence would be a gentle encouragement to remain alert, to make one's own decisions, rather than being served hand and foot.

Prospective clients would be interviewed and assessed and physical ailments and medications noted. Doctor's approval would be mandatory.

"We want as much information as possible about any clients so that we'll be completely aware of what we're doing and can devise a program that can be maintained, as well, when the client is at home."

Whether it's bladder control, a special diet, or a specific ailment, Chin told the Herald.

"Co-operation with the people involved in the home environment is also required."

"Clients have the assurance of knowing they'll return home at the end of the day," he said. "But if they do eventually become residents, the process would be much slower, much easier for them."

Chin was unsure what the program would cost clients, but doubted the expense would be any more than the price tag for meals.

Marg Langley of the Terrace Community Services Society says the program would complement the home care and meals-on-wheels programs her group offers.

She noted that Skeenaview now supplies the dinners for the transport meals program and "would be quite compatible with an activities centre."

The lodge personnel are familiar with all the clients of the Homemakers program, she said.

"Gradually, it keeps building, we get feedbacks," she said. "Meals-on-wheels started with 10 to 15 people at peak times and now serves upwards of 35."

She said that volunteers may be enlisted to provide transportation to the centre.

Insecurity

A curious phenomenon of our age is the preponderance of "How To" books. Go into any bookstore. There are such books on nearly every subject, from gardening to capital investment, from sex to spiritual enlightenment.

It can be argued that in this day and age, people are more aware and are seriously trying to better themselves. That argument, however, is not very sensible. Rather, the "How To" books, some of which are absolutely outlandish, indicate a state of mass confusion and blind searching.

Think about it for a moment. Isn't it patently ridiculous to read a book called "How to Make Love to a Single Girl" and then go out and try to apply what you believe you've learned? There are books on how to eat properly, how to get to sleep, how to be popular, how to succeed, how to be happy, how to rid yourself of fear, how to face death, how to stay physically fit.

It is as though the whole life is a riddle and each "How To" book a clue. "If I read enough of them, I will become a balanced, complete human being, with no doubts and insecurities."

Human individuals conceptualize themselves as in a state of constant becoming. One is always becoming something, always building and accumulating. But to what end? Man spends his childhood dreaming, his adulthood planning and his old age reminiscing and on his death bed looks back on his life as "One long, boring Sunday afternoon."

The truth is we are riddled with doubt. We find ourselves alive on earth and we wonder about that. We are trapped in a continual round of up and down, with the same idiosyncrasies, habits, problems, conversations, thoughts and actions endlessly repeated as though in a surrealist movie or slightly warped nightmare. All our lives are fashioned around these doubts but it is customary to act as though they did not exist.

Though we may try to walk through life as though there are no questions, concerns, fears, or misgivings, they are there, perhaps hidden, probably smoldering and eroding away the heart. As we wonder whether others are as troubled as ourselves or if we are slightly inferior in some aspect of life, we resort to the "How To" books, standing shoulder to shoulder with other bookstore patrons, trying to extract the bits of wisdom that may rid us of our doubts.

But the doubter remains always and the process is infinite. There is no end to that kind of relative knowledge, nor will the pleasure one thing one will gain by making love or being the hit of a party alter the fundamental insecurity that underlies one's life.

Resorting to books to learn how to live would be valid if we were not now alive but were about to be. Though we were born through no self-exertion, we fret and struggle and honestly believe we will enhance the quality of existence through the acquisition of such knowledge as "Winning through Intimidation" or "How to Cook without Meat".

Except for the most practical volumes, "How To" books appeal primarily to the ego. If through reading these books and pursuing the pleasures they promise the ego would finally be content, then there would be a point to all this. But the ego is the doubter. The fatter it becomes, the more it doubts.

The one who takes a "How to Make Love" book home and reads it in his solitude is only Narcissus making overtures to himself. The one who studies "Winning through Intimidation" will be the same old bore with a few more strategies to occupy his hyperactive mind.

New Yorkers mine Quebec bonanza

By ESTELLE DORAIS
MONTREAL (CP) — Banking indicators calculated monthly since April, 1975, for Clinton County, N. Y., show significant increases in money flows from Quebec into the Plattsburg area at the time of the Nov. 15 provincial election.

The indicators are based on data from six banks and are calculated by the Technical Assistance Center of State University of New York in Plattsburg.

"We can see trends," said the center's economic development specialist. "We can definitely state we can see an impact from Quebec."

"The activity is in terms of deposits," Robert Daly said.

Clinton County banks give data to the Center on a confidential basis and no figures are available for the dollar value of their deposits.

But Plattsburg is somewhat of a banking center, generating more volume than would be expected in a town of comparable size and the center said a figure of close to $500 million was a fair estimate.

The index of monthly total dollar amounts of all deposits stood at a high of 200 for November, 1976, up from 102 in November, 1975.

The base period of the index is the mean for the 12-month period from April, 1975 through March, 1976. This base year is set at 100 which is compared to each month's data.

The November figure was up from 110 in October and came down to 168 in December, 165 in January and dropped sharply to 115 in February.

But the figure for February, 1976 was only 76. Total deposits for March, the latest month calculated, show a climb to 125, compared with 114 for March last year.

HAVE TAPERED OFF
"When it (the index) begins to get pretty similar, I would postulate that the big change (radical government action) did not take place and you have the situation where people have sort of tapered off," Daly said.

But the figures in this indicator only show total activity during a given month.

The cumulative or balance sheet figures for total bank deposits show an index figure of 148 as of November, 1976, up from 112 as of the previous November.

Although the differences are not as sharp, the balance sheet figures show significantly higher levels than in the past.

And the March figures—132 for March and 100 for March last year—show a higher trend than those for the month by month index.

"The trend line is going up at a steeper rate," Daly said. "The rate of deposits in those accounts have increased."

Although the increases are not all due to Quebec money, a strong correlation exists between the monthly total amounts in American dollars of Canadian funds sold.

Daly said this measures all the Canadian funds accepted by the banks and is made up of retail spending and deposits made in Canadian funds. "The fellow who brings $4,000 down here to open an account" is included in this index, he said.

Canadian funds sales reached the index figure of 246 in November, 1976, up from 148 the month before and from 68 in November, 1975.

EXCLUDES U.S. FUNDS
This excludes any money Quebecers convert to U.S.

funds before spending it in the Plattsburg area.

The index went down to 144 in December, up to 152 in January, down again to 108 in February, and sprang back to 152 in March. The figure in March, 1976 was 80.

It "shows a phenomenal increase in Canadian funds handled by the Clinton County banks," says a report issued in January on the banking indicators.

Fisheries Act changes lauded

The Rt. Hon. Romeo LeBlanc
Minister of the Environment and Fisheries
House of Commons
Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Mr. LeBlanc

The Save Our Shores Committee in Prince Rupert wishes to express our wholehearted support for the proposed amendments to the federal Fisheries Act, embodied in the new legislation under Bill C-38.

SOS believes these amendments are crucial to the development of a comprehensive and truly effective Fisheries Act. They serve to strengthen and clarify the existing legislation, and go a long way towards providing meaningful protection for our coastal waters and fisheries resource.

In B.C., aquatic habitats and spawning areas have been subjected to unprecedented environmental disruption and mismanagement.

The headwaters of streams and rivers have been clear-cut logged, whole river systems have been jammed, spawning grounds destroyed and delicate saltwater estuaries polluted and encroached upon by landfill projects.

The B.C. Wildlife Federation claims that 70 percent of the Fraser River estuary "has been destroyed". According to a Vancouver Sun survey, every major river and lake in B.C. is now polluted or threatened by a hydroelectric project.

Never before has this province been faced with such a massive onslaught against the ecology of its marine and inland waterways.

As well as the disastrous consequences of a major oil spill from offshore tanker traffic, our west coast fishery is also threatened at the heart: on the river systems and estuaries that provide the habitat and spawning grounds for juvenile fish.

Already, the Fraser River has become a dumping ground for sewage effluent, toxic metals, pesticides, detergents, oils, fertilizers and pulp mill effluent.

The Fraser fishery is further endangered by B.C. Hydro's proposed McGregor diversion project. This proposal would alter the natural flow of the river and could cause a potentially devastating assault on salmon stocks from the possible introduction of tapeworm parasites.

SOS feels that it would be ludicrous to proceed with a $150 million Salmonid Enhancement Program under these circumstances.

Therefore, we submit that Bill C-38 must be a priority for your ministry and should be made law as soon as possible. If one important mandate of your ministry is to protect and manage the fisheries resource, this new legislation must form a basis for action before the fact. Specifically, major hydroelectric projects such as the McGregor diversion should be monitored closely for environmental impact on fishery habitats.

SOS sees the McGregor diversion and similar projects such as the proposed Revelstoke Dam as very real threats to our salmon fishery.

We trust that the new amendments to the Fisheries Act will enable your ministry to take a more active and protectionist stance in preserving the integrity of B.C.'s waterways.

TERRACE CLINIC, AUG. 10

Giving the Canadian way

"Donating blood is part of the Canadian way of life." So says Florence Edwards, Director of Blood Donor Recruitment for B.C.-Yukon Red Cross.

But isn't that a bit of an exaggeration when you consider that only about one Canadian in 50 is a regular blood donor?

Blood collection systems vary around the world.

"We Canadians enjoy a voluntary blood transfusion service run for us by the Red Cross which utilizes volunteer blood donors exclusively and much free labour by Red Cross clinic volunteers to supplement paid technical staff," Miss Edwards notes.

This contrasts with Britain, for instance, where blood is collected by the Government with all staff on the public payroll. It also contrasts with the United States where, until recently, most blood has been bought and sold for profit by commercial blood banks.

In many countries of Europe and elsewhere the Red Cross operates volunteer blood services like the one pioneered in British Columbia 30 years ago and extended across Canada in the following few years.

Before 1947, Miss Edwards recalls, "getting a blood transfusion was a real hassle in Canada. Relatives and friends would have to be found to replace all the blood used, for instance. Jimmy Carter recently became the first U.S. President to donate blood to the American Red Cross, and some 86 of his staff also responded at the annual White House blood drive. There will be a clinic held in Terrace at the Arena Hall, banquet room, Wednesday, August 10, from 2 to 8 p.m.

much hepatitis as volunteer blood, according to experts in Washington.

Because of this, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has decided to order that the 10 million units of blood used in transfusions and other treatments each year be plainly marked "volunteer" or "paid donor".

This blood comes from paid donors, many of them from Skid Road, and it causes five to 10 times as many hepatitis as volunteer blood, according to experts in Washington.

Because of this, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration has decided to order that the 10 million units of blood used in transfusions and other treatments each year be plainly marked "volunteer" or "paid donor".

About four years ago at the urging of Caspar Weinberger, then Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, most U.S. groups handling blood formed an American Blood Commission to try to work towards safe blood through an all-volunteer system - "like we have in Canada," Miss Edwards notes.

Interpreting the news

Revised language charter similar to old

Editor's note: This article, dealing with the revised language bill introduced in the Quebec National Assembly Tuesday, was written for the Canadian Press by the editor-in-chief of Quebec Le Soleil.

By CLAUDE BEAUCHAMP
QUEBEC (CP) — Four days after Ontario Attorney-General Roy McMurtry went to Montreal to explain to Quebec public opinion why Toronto could not give a French trial to a Quebec businessman called before Ontario courts, the Quebec government made public its new version of the bill for the Charter of the French Language in Quebec.

There is no other connection between the two events other than a political one. But this coincidence in timing greatly eased the task of Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin, who announced Tuesday, following three weeks of study in a national assembly committee, some 40 changes in his original bill, none of which changed the fundamental principles which guided the original writing of the proposed charter.

Laurin ignored the principal demand of English-speaking groups in the area of the language of education by continuing to limit access to the English public school system to those children whose parents already are established in Quebec at the time the charter is passed. But he could state that under the proposed charter an English-speaking person has the right to have his trial conducted in English in Quebec. Only French versions of texts of laws, regulations and judgements will have the force of law, but the use of English is permitted.

OFFICIAL UNILINGUALISM

In a word, although it is difficult to sum up 219 legal clauses in one single picture it can be said that what the proposed Charter of the French Language does is make institutions French - government, municipalities, public and para-public groups, businesses, professional corporations, etc. - while allowing bilingualism, or the use of English, on an individual level. Thus a deputy minister and a mayor must write each other in French although they may both be English, but may talk to each other in English although they may both be French-speaking. All citizens may communicate with government organizations in English and receive a reply in English and receive a reply in English. Municipalities which are mostly English as well as English school boards will be able to communicate with those they deal with in both languages.

The new version of the charter will not satisfy those who insist on official bilingualism, nor those who oppose putting a ceiling on the expansion of the English-language school sector. Neither will it prevent businesses who fear francization from leaving Quebec. However it likely will alleviate most of the anxieties expressed in the 260 briefs presented to the government, all of which were closely examined even though only about 60 were discussed in public committee hearings.

Here, very briefly, is what the situation of French and English will be in Quebec if the charter is adopted in its current form, which is very likely even though Rene Levesque's government may have in reserve a last-minute strategic concession concerning admission of Canadians from other provinces to the English school sector.

Of course, to begin with, the only official language will be French, which already has been the case since the passage of Bill 22 in 1974.

LANGUAGE OF EDUCATION

On the most controversial point, that of language of education, the situation will be as follows:

All French-speaking persons and all future immigrants to Quebec, whatever their language or wherever they come from, will have to enrol in French schools.

The English sector will thus be limited to children already enrolled in the English systems, to their younger brothers and sisters and, in future, to those children having at least one parent who received primary education in an English school in Quebec or one parent who was living in Quebec at the time the charter was passed and who received his elementary education in English anywhere.

Regarding the language of education, there is one major point to remember: the restrictions on English exist only for primary and secondary schools financed by the government. Absolute freedom of choice exists at the junior college and university levels.

Fears among some English-speaking people of seeing English culture disappear gradually from Quebec thus seem totally exaggerated, so much more so because the French charter puts no restriction on popular forms of cultural communication, whether it be the press, radio, television or film.

LANGUAGE OF BUSINESS

At the level of the language of work, commerce and business, the charter falls into administrative and bureaucratic heaviness. This is unfortunately inevitable since the goal of the charter is to change reality in this area. The new version of the charter is nonetheless much more acceptable than the original version. The government took into account the most general criticism of the business world and softened several harsher aspects of the original text.

Briefly, under the charter all companies will be obligated to deal with their personnel and clientele in French. But this does not forbid the use of English on an individual basis.

The charter also provides numerous exceptions to the obligatory use of French, particularly for head offices, small businesses, research centres and ethnic, cultural, political, ideological and religious groups, not to mention the special treatment granted to the Cree and Inuit.

Finally, and this also responds to general criticisms, the language charter, in contrast to the original bill, will be under the jurisdiction of the Human Rights Charter which will take precedence over the language bill.

The government of Premier Rene Levesque has thus built its nest in a definitive fashion. Having learned from the electoral misadventures of the governments of Jean-Jacques Bertrand in 1970 and Robert Bourassa in 1976, the Pequistes in power in Quebec City know that on the issue of language legislation it is impossible to satisfy both a majority of francophones and a majority of anglophones. They decided to rely on the French-speaking majority even if it means totally alienating the English-speaking community. For there is no doubt that the great majority of French-speaking Quebecers support the government's move in this area.

After eight years of uninterrupted debate on language, during which five bills were presented and two laws passed, Quebecers in general are eager for a linguistic charter which is at once viable and in the interests of the majority of the population.

BETTER SKILLS FOR GRADUATES

McGeer keeps "radical legislation" under wraps

VANCOUVER CP — Education Minister Pat McGeer said Wednesday that he is preparing some "extremely controversial" legislation designed to improve students' chances of getting jobs but refused to explain why the legislation would be controversial.

McGeer told the annual luncheon meeting of the Men's Canadian Club that he plans "radical changes in the educational system so as to give more of the students who're leaving school the kind of skills that will get them employment in today's job market." Legislation would be introduced "in the near future."

McGeer refused to give any details of the proposed legislation, but said the intention will be to increase the number of students in the work force.

The program accompanying the legislation will increase the number of vocational training courses in post-secondary institutions, he said.

"In British Columbia somewhere between 40 percent and 45 percent of our unemployed are under the age of 25," he said, adding young people should be the most desirable employees because of their strength, ambition and enthusiasm.

NOT MARKETABLE
"The terrible problem is that too many have no marketable skills," said McGeer.

When such youths cannot find work their energy is channeled into crime: "It must explode in frustration," said the minister.

"There are currently 55,000 full-time students in our universities, colleges and provincial institutes. There are a further 155,000 students in our high schools."

"All 210,000 are potential members of our summer work force and 40,000 enter the work force permanently each year. Those who leave school today with occupational skills have little difficulty finding work. The others have an extremely hard time."

An $80 million payment from the federal government Tuesday will pay for courses that will teach post-secondary students "marketable skills," and the provincial government will contribute additional money to the program, he said.

He said during an interview that part of the program will attempt to teach students "how to be employers and put others to work."

PARK DETAILS DISCLOSED
McGeer also disclosed a few new details of the "discovery park" plan, which he announced last April.

The plan would bring together high technology industry representatives and university researchers at facilities to be built on university campuses throughout the province in hopes of developing improved technologies, he said.

"Investment by the government will be extremely small," McGeer added. The departments of education and economic development will organize the setup and provide the sites, but the research will be paid for by the companies which use it.

McGeer said the plan is close to being put into operation and his department hopes to locate the sites within the next few months.

Before McGeer's speech the club awarded honorary life memberships to former B.C. lieutenant-governor George Pearkes and former Conservative external affairs minister Howard Green. The club also elected Ron Longstaffe, executive vice-president of Canadian Forest Products, as president.

Crash of planes a mid-air collision?

VICTORIA (CP) — The crash of two light planes that killed eight Iowa residents in northeastern British Columbia Monday may have been the result of a mid-air collision, a spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre said Thursday.

The spokesman said investigators at the crash sites, 80 miles southeast of Fort Nelson, are investigating the mid-air collision theory because the two planes were found only half-mile apart.

The two planes were part of a group of eight carrying members of the Flying Farmers group from Iowa and Indiana on a tour of Western Canada. They were reported missing Monday after running into bad weather on a flight to Whitehorse, Yukon, from Dawson Creek, B.C.

Killed were Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schultz of Castalia, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. George Knudson of Decorah, Iowa; and Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Smith, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Smith, all of Evansdale, Iowa.

Budworm spreads says Waterland

VICTORIA (CP) — Budworm infestation will claim another 200,000 acres of Fraser Canyon forest before next summer, Forests Minister Tom Waterland said Wednesday.

He said infestation between Yale and Boston Bar has spread into previously unaffected areas and more than 600,000 acres of forest land now have been defoliated.

A proposed 52,000-acre spraying program was cancelled in May, despite Waterland's objections, after protests by Fraser Canyon ratepayers' groups and environmentalists against proposed use of 50,000 pounds of Orthene and Sevin-X to combat the pest.

Waterland said there is no way to stop the infestation this year using chemicals and a hoped-for natural collapse has shown no signs of occurring.

Okanagan cherries hit by tree disease

PENTICTON, B.C. (CP) — The Little Cherry Disease is spreading in the Okanagan Valley, a federal agricultural research officer said Thursday.

Dr. John Yorsten said about 200 diseased trees have been marked for removal this summer.

"But the seriousness is not in the number of trees," he said. "It's in the fact that the disease is widespread in the district."

He said in the past the disease was contained to pockets in the Pentiction area, but now has spread to Naramata, 11 miles north of here.

He said the disease, which is spread by an unidentified insect and results in small, misshapen fruit, wiped out cherry production in the Kootenay area during the 1950s.

There are 5,000 acres of cherries in the Okanagan and last year production was more than 9,000 tons.

CROWN PURSUES PERJURY CHARGE

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — The Crown will appeal the dismissal of perjury charges against mayor Bill Moore of Courtenay, crown counsel Jim Taylor said Thursday.

Moore, mayor of the central Vancouver Island community, was sentenced to three months in jail and fined $1,000 June 14 in Nanaimo after being found guilty of obstructing justice. He was acquitted on two perjury charges.

All charges arose from an impaired driving trial in Courtenay last year when Moore was fined $500.

The Crown's perjury allegations stemmed from Moore's statements during the trial that his wife Eileen was driving when they were stopped by police.

New cheap charter system discussed

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian transport commission will hold public hearings in September to determine whether a new cheap, domestic air charter system should be started between cities.

The commission said in a statement Tuesday it has found enough interest in a domestic equivalent of the popular advanced booking charter (ABC) plan to hold hearings beginning Sept. 12 in Ottawa. At the moment, ABC rules apply only to international air travel.

CP Air and Air Canada have already started a "charter-class fare" system that is like the ABC plan in some ways. But seats can be obtained only on regularly-scheduled flights and there have been complaints that there are not enough seats available to meet demand.

Pacific Western Airlines (PWA) has also operated charter flights between Toronto and Vancouver. But because there are no domestic ABC rules, passengers were taken by bus to Niagara Falls, N.Y.

IN FOAL TO SECRETARIAT

Search for filly now into Canada

TORONTO (CP) — The search for Franreluche, the 10-year-old mare in foal to Triple Crown winner Secretariat abducted from a Paris, Ky., broodmare ranch on June 25, has swung to Canada.

The Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau has released a composite photo of a man observed near the scene. The mare in foal is valued at $500,000.

The suspect, in the composite photo being shown around tracks in Canada, is described as being a white male, 25 to 28 years of age with wavy, brown hair covering the tops of his ears and a short, cropped mustache.

He was reported driving a 1969 to 1973 dark-green pickup truck and pulling a horse trailer that appeared to be painted aluminum.

The bay mare, 16 hands high, has a white star on the centre of her forehead, white stockings on both hind ankles and black spots on the rear coronets. A tattoo on the inside of her upper lip reads "W12991."

Franreluche, owned by Jean Louis Levesque of Montreal, has been described by veterinarians as "an habitual aborter," requiring special drugs during pregnancies.

The mare was North American champion filly in 1970 and Canada's Horse of the Year. Her best-known offspring, L'Enjoleur, won the 1975 Queen's Plate and Canadian Horse of the Year honors in 1974 and 1975.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation, Kentucky state police and the RCMP are at odds to explain the theft, since no ransom has been demanded.

VANCOUVER

Provinces amateurs in golf tournament

VANCOUVER (CP) — The top amateur golfers in British Columbia will compete for places on two provincial men's teams this weekend with 18-hole rounds at Shaughnessy and Marine Drive golf clubs.

The B.C. Golf Association has invited the top 23 B.C. players from the provincial amateur in Kamloops and the top 22 juniors from the B.C. tournament in West Vancouver to compete in the B.C. Invitational on Saturday at Shaughnessy and Sunday at Marine Drive.

Directors of the BCGA will meet following Sunday's round to select four players for the B.C. Willingdon Cup team and four juniors for the inter-provincial team matches.

Doug Roxburgh of Marine Drive won the B.C. Amateur with a 285 total over 72 holes in Kamloops, followed by Garnet Lineker of Kamloops at 286, and Dave Mick of Gorge Vale, Victoria, and Dick Zokol of Marine Drive, both at 288.

Jim Rutledge of Cedar Hill, Victoria, won the B.C. Junior in West Vancouver with a 72-hole total of 296, followed by Rob Sherstobitoff of Castlegar at 296.

Watson-Nicklaus

SUTTON, Mass. (AP) — The Jack Nicklaus-Tom Watson duel continued while veteran Fred Marti, hitting his approach with uncanny accuracy off the bluegrass fairways, cut out a record 64 and established a three-stroke lead Thursday in the first round of the $250,000 Pleasant Valley golf Classic.

Watson and Nicklaus, who fought each other in one of gold's great matchups last week in the British Open, matched three under-par scores in the hot, sunny weather

Vern Jacques greets Dave (Smilin') Hamilton as he touches his home run plate of the game in last night's Bulkley Valley League action. Hamilton has increased his league leading total to 5.

TERRACE TEAMS CLASHReds tame Colts

The Terrace Reds pounded out fourteen hits and scored eleven runs as they defeated the Colts by an 11-4 margin Thursday in Bulkley Valley League action at Kerr Rotary Park.

The Reds took a one run lead in the first inning when lead off hitter Dave Hamilton, who had got on by an error, scored on Lorrie Arnold-Smith's single.

The lead was short-lived however as Jim Webb and Myron Crown scored for the Colts on three hits.

In the second the Reds got four more runs as Bud Brown, Lance Legouffe, Hamilton and Garry L'Estrange singled and Arnold-Smith drove two of them home.

The Colts closed the gap to one on a two run homer by Webb. Paul Dakin had received a walk when Webb blasted a waist high fast ball over the centre field fence. From there on the Colts were held scoreless.

The Reds got one more in each of the third and fourth innings as Brown and Jack Richard picked up RBIs.

In the sixth the Reds picked up four more runs as ten batters went to the plate. Hamilton led things off with a solo homer, a line shot over the left field wall. Both L'Estrange and Arnold-Smith reached base on errors, Richard was walked and two runs scored when Barry Heit reached second on another Colt error.

Pitcher Darcy Budiselich then walked in the last run of the game before the side was retired.

Colt coach Colin Chasteaufault halted the game after six innings because of darkness.

Bud Brown started for the Reds but was relieved early by Lorrie Arnold-Smith who was credited with the victory.

The loss was given to Bob Sheridan who started for the Colts and got relief from Darcy Budiselich.

The win increased the Reds record to 12 wins and 6 losses while the Colts dropped to 5 and 13.

The Reds have this weekend off while the Colts host the Hazelton club at Kerr-Rotary on Sunday.

Baseball RoundupSeaver and Foster a powerful package

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

George Foster's three home runs backed Tom Seaver's twofit pitching as Cincinnati Reds defeated Atlanta Braves 7-1 in a National League baseball game Thursday night.

Seaver, who also slugged a home run, walked the first two batters in the game and then retired 18 hitters in a row. Willie Montanez hit a one-out double in the seventh inning to end Seaver's bid for his first career no-hitter.

Foster took over the league home run leadership with 28, and padded his league-leading runs-batted-in total to 88 with his five RBIs Thursday.

In other National League action, a double by Jose

Cruz and single by Joe Ferguson in the eighth inning broke up a duel between all-star pitchers Joaquin Andujar of Houston and Don Sutton of Los Angeles and rallied the Astros to a 4-3 victory over the Dodgers.

Pinch-hitter Hector Cruz smashed a run-scoring double in the 11th inning, then scored the winning run as St. Louis Cardinals took a 7-6 victory from Philadelphia Phillies.

Chicago Cubs and New York Mets were postponed due to the after-effects of the blackout that hit New York on Wednesday night.

In the American League, Reggie Jackson slammed a pair of home runs for three RBIs and George Zeber's two-run homer capped a four-run seventh inning, powering New York Yankees to a 6-3 victory over Milwaukee Brewers.

Ken Kravec tossed a threehitter and Richie Zisk scored the winning run from second base on an error in the eighth inning as Chicago White Sox defeated Toronto Blue Jays 2-1.

Frank White singled and tripled, driving in three runs, to lead Kansas City Royals past Detroit Tigers 4-3.

Butch Hobson's home run sparked a three-run sixth-inning rally that carried Boston Red Sox to a 7-4 victory over Cleveland Indians.

Ross Grimsley hurled a seven-hitter to lead Baltimore Orioles to a 6-1 victory over Texas Rangers.

Dear Abby...

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked you if a 13-year-old boy could get a girl pregnant, and I'm glad you said yes because I am living proof of it.

Five months ago I got a 15-year-old girl pregnant. Her parents and mine raised a terrible fuss and sent threats back and forth. The girl finally got an abortion, and we aren't allowed to see each other again.

Might I add that my puberty started when I was 11.

THIRTEEN AND OLD ENOUGH

DEAR THIRTEEN: And might I add that you aren't the only 13-year-old boy who wrote to confirm that fact? I also heard from several girls stating that they had become pregnant at the age of 12. (Readers: If you find that shocking, consider this: In 1975, 12,642 babies were born in the U.S. to girls between the ages of 10 and 14.)

DEAR ABBY: I am a fourth grade teacher employed in a suburb of Minneapolis, Minn. During the past few years I have found that most of my students seem to appreciate physical contact.

In early December my building principal called me into his office and told me that a parent had called the superintendent and expressed concern that my actions were, if not morally improper, certainly "weird" and abnormal.

After my initial shock I asked who complained, and what specifically was the nature of their complaint. I never was told who, but I was told that each of the following actions was cause for alarm.

1. I had allowed some of my students to occasionally sit on my lap.

2. I had occasionally given a student a back rub.

3. I had occasionally given a student a hug.

For many months thereafter I have been continually impressed how a paranoid, bigoted, uniformed minority could make a life miserable and influence school politics. I deeply regret that an all too influential element of my community finds it impossible to accept a MALE teacher who is physically affectionate to his students but has no intention of sexual exploitation.

How can I possibly continue to meet the human needs of my students when I am expected to respond like a cold-blooded computer?

CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: I fail to see what being male has to do with the criticism. I'm sure a female teacher would be criticized for giving her students back rubs, allowing them to sit on her lap and hugging them.

While your motives may have been beyond reproach, the kind of physical contact you engaged in might easily be mistaken for intimacy beyond acceptable limits. Kindergarten and possibly first graders, yes—but fourth graders, no.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.
